Art Unit: 3682

Claims 1-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 112, first and second paragraphs, as the claimed invention is not described in such full, clear, concise and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to make and use the same, and/or for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

What is an "internal radial gap"? The cited portion of the specification does not define it.

The term "small" in the claims is a relative term which renders the claim indefinite. The term "small" is not defined by the claim, the specification does not provide a standard for ascertaining the requisite degree, and one of ordinary skill in the art would not be reasonably apprised of the scope of the invention.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-4, to the extent definite and understood, are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103 as being unpatentable over Nagai et al. in view of official notice of common knowledge in the art and further, as to 3 and 4, in view of engineering design choice.

The examiner finds that Fig. 2a of Nagai et al. discloses the claimed invention except for the following limitations of these claims. He finds that providing the claimed bearing in a motor environment would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made since it is well known to employ ball bearings in motors to reduce friction compared to plain bearings.

Claims 3 and 4, to the extent definite and understood, are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103 as being unpatentable over Nagai et al. as set forth in the rejection of claims 1-2 above, and further in view of engineering design choice.

The provision of a specified "internal radial gap" vis-à-vis that disclosed by the reference solves no stated problem insofar as the record is concerned and, accordingly, would have been an obvious matter of design choice. See In re Kuhle, 526 F.2d 553, 188 USPQ 7 (CCPA 1975).
